Gen 2:21-22 And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, ... And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.

What Is God Hoping For?

Intro

My cup of revelation or, at least, understanding continues to be full here. This morning these two passages having to do with "desirability" came to me:

"He grew up before him like a tender shoot, and like a root out of dry ground. He had no beauty or majesty to attract us to him, nothing in his appearance that we should desire him." Isaiah 53:2 NIV

"I will send my messenger, who will prepare the way before me. Then suddenly the Lord you are seeking will come to his temple; the messenger of the covenant, whom you desire, will come," says the LORD Almighty. Malachi 3:1 NIV

In the flesh, Jesus does not appear to be very desirable. It's pretty hard to beat the cross where the expression of undesirability is concerned, and yet... and yet..."... suddenly the desire of all nations shall come, and I will fill this house with glory,' says the LORD Almighty," Haggai 2:7 KJV - "Christ in us, the hope of glory."

One of the things that I am dealing with in the moment are the thunder storms going on in my mind. Let's call them "thought storms." They contain dark clouds, as well as lightning flashes. None of them seem suitable for sharing with my closest love ones. Because what our loved ones are struggling with is perhaps the greatest concern contributing to our thought storms. I can't help but think that these things are meant to be shared, however, but, in the moment, they seem more easily shared with those who are not emotionally involved. So to share them with you guys is a bit problematic for me. That said, here goes:

From one vantage point all of life can be seen as a biography of desirability. Early on there is the up side as, everything else being equal, (yes, I know it seldom is) we come into to full flower - the "coming of age," I think it's called. Then comes the down side. Let's call it "creeping undesirability." Again, on the gender spectrum, this involves everything from "attractiveness" on the female end to "competence" on the male end. While I am well aware that details tend to blur this distinction, there is so much money spent by females on the pursuit of attractiveness, that on that count alone, the distinction is undeniable. On the other hand, while men don't appreciate being ugly, their/our greatest struggle or insecurity lies elsewhere, and is not so easy to identify as any particular industry, but perhaps fuels all industry.

With a terminal illness, or even the contemplation of terminal, comes a flash of lightning out of the dark cloud that feels like the last straw where personal undesirability is concerned.

Jesus knows this struggle - this storm. In a sense He sweat blood over it. "Never let them see you sweat?" Apparently someone saw Him sweat, because they put it in the Book. Perhaps their cat naps were fitful, and they woke up long enough or enough to see some of what was happening in His contemplation of a very undesirable event in His life.

So, here's the deal: it has to do with the desolate woman - that's not only what gives birth to us where our flesh side is concerned, but it is also the end of us in the flesh.

More and more I have come to understand that our flesh is just not compatible with either God or eternity. Early this morning I started a new blog subject, (lovinglikegod.com) having to do with what God (the Creator) is/was hoping for when He frustrated His own creation, Romans 8:20. (see the blog entry dated February 20, 2011) We desperately need to discover what He is hoping for, because it is the complete opposite of undesirability. It is our being begotten into compatibility with The Father, The Son, and The Spirit.

Help us Lord to get that, so that our lives begin to reflect where you are taking us in Your Son, and not so much where we have been in our flesh!

Here is the revelation:

Hebrews 11:1 tells us that "Faith is the substance of things hoped for..." Hope is the raw material without which faith has nothing to work with – to make substantial. Elsewhere we are told that this "... faith works by love..." 😊 (It doesn't work without love either.)

What I want to focus on here by way of introduction is the matter of hope. What are you hoping for or more importantly, what is God hoping for? Wouldn't it be nice if we could all get on the same page as God where this matter of hope is concerned? In the next day or so, I would like to take a look at hope from the vantage point of Romans 8:20: "*For the creation was subjected to frustration, not by its own choice, but by the will of the one who subjected it, in hope..."

What is God hoping for? 😊

Why would The Creator frustrate His own creation?

Having frustrated it in hope, what was He hoping for?

Romans is careful to tell us that neither the creation nor created things were responsible for the frustration, but the Creator Himself.

When did this happen? What happened? Why?

Romans 8:24 asks the question, “Who hopes for what they already have?”

To frustrate a creation, one must first have a creation, so the creation must have already been created at the time it was subjected to frustration. It must have been before “the fall.” The frustration was already in the garden before “the fall,” and was a contributing factor leading to “the fall.”

What was God hoping for, which is to say, What was it He did not already have? Why did He neglect to create what He was hoping for? Was it an oversight on The Creator’s part? We think not. It could only be there must have been something The Creator could not create – something He was hoping for that frustration could facilitate.

Here are a few of many verses we could have chosen to help us find the answer:

“This is how God showed his love among us: He sent his one and only Son into the world that we might live through him.” 1 John 4:9 NIV

“In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. He was with God in the beginning.” John 1:1, 2 NIV

“For those God foreknew he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brothers and sisters.” Romans 8:29 NIV

“The promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. Scripture does not say “and to seeds,” meaning many people, but “and to your seed,” [Gen. 12:7; 13:15; 24:7] meaning one person, who is Christ.” Galatians 3:16

Speaking of His own death, Jesus said: “Very truly I tell you, unless a kernel of wheat falls to the ground and dies, it remains only a single seed. But if it dies, it produces many seeds.” John 12:24 NIV

As I understand it, The Creator subjected His own creation to frustration, because He was hoping for something that could not be done by “mere” creation.

As I understand it, The Creator was after divine reproduction. That reproduction would be necessary to produce, many sons of God, Many brothers for His Son, and the glorious liberty of the children of God. Glorious liberty is the fruit of the salvation package, (“being saved by His life” Romans 5:10). With this new heart, we are able to do anything our hearts desire. How FREE IS THAT?!?!?!?!!!!

That is Gloriously FREE!!!!

In the image of that, he created the first Adam male and female. I think I should also note that “male and female” was for image purposes, and old creation reproduction only. Image is not yet reality. The reality that is only found in Christ is “neither... male nor female..,” Galatians 3:28.

By the end of the 6th day, the woman was still in Adam. The woman had not been removed yet. What is needed to understand this is not theology, but a basic understanding of the facts of life – “the birds and the bees.” Reproduction requires, a father, a mother, a seed – egg, and chemistry. The “Us” that said, “...let us make,” and subsequently subjected to frustration what He/“Us” said, that same “Us” contained the Father, the Seed, and the Chemistry, (The Spirit) – “Trinity,” but there was not yet any woman – no human mother. (As I understand it, like the rest of the first Adam, she was only a “created” mother, not a “begotten” mother. Problem is, “created things shake,” Hebrews 12:27. Things begotten of Christ, The New Creation, don’t shake, John 8:35.

For The Creator to get what He was after, the woman had to be removed from the first Adam, and that removal subjected the whole creation to frustration. They were still in the garden after she was taken out, but they were now “less than” they had been at the end of the sixth day, when their unity was perfect, even intercellular, so to speak, (a union so perfect, so complete, that no words were necessary their first evening of the first day they entered into God’s rest). Remember God called it all “very good” at the close of the sixth day.

The perfect union would not have been vulnerable to the lie, certainly not as vulnerable, but the frustration that comes from being “less than” is very vulnerable to the lie, and sure enough, they both “bought the lie,” (swallowed it) and were cast out of the garden. “Less than” people make bad choices. Romans 8 is talking to “more than” people, Romans 8:37.

Not to worry, Plan “A” was still good. It included the frustration, and in due time the woman would be put back into another Adam, “the last Adam,” (1 Corinthians 15:45-49) even Christ, There would be reproduction, divine reproduction, because He would also be put into her. The Seed required for that to happen would have to wait until Christ was cast into the ground to die, rise from the dead, deliver to the Father what The Father needed in order to keep His promise, and fulfill His hope, the hope that He had from the beginning.

The reproduction began on the day of Pentecost, when a new generation, (one requiring the frustration of the old) would begin to reproduce. (Please be assured that I am not saying that everyone “born of woman” prior to the availability of this Seed was or is hopelessly lost. While Jesus said that the greatest of the Old Testament saints was less than the least in The Kingdom of God, I do believe that there is room in the economy of God to fix that problem for people like John the Baptist, and Moses, and the others so well typified in Hebrews, Chapter Eleven. Before moving on, I need to address what is quite possibly another widely held misunderstanding: the assumed loneliness of the first Adam prior to the removal of the woman. If she was in the first Adam before she was removed – taken out of the first Adam, then how lonely could he have been? In John 17 Jesus prayed that we would be one as he and the Father had been one before the world began. That also doesn’t sound very lonely to me. To break the essential oneness of the first Adam, so that one flesh now required interactive plumbing rather than intercellular intimacy, looks to me to be the defining moment of the frustration of the creation, rather than an improvement in the first Adam’s situation.

This suggests another look at the phrase: “It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him a helper as his partner.” Perhaps it was not good from the vantage point of what God was hoping for, and not due to the first Adam’s loneliness... UNLESS... the loneliness was designed to reveal the heart of the Godhead. A case could be made that God was lonely before the foundation of the world, and wanted more than only one Son. That would be another matter. What troubles me here is the preoccupation with male/female plumbing as the highest expression of “one flesh.” (The cause of leaving and cleaving and one fleshing was the fact that in the beginning God had made them one – she was in the first Adam, Mathew 19:3-8). That is also where we see her again in the “last Adam,” (Romans 7:4). It may well have been that it “wasn’t good,” because God needed a woman for reproductive purposes, and that reproduction, ultimately His own, Isaiah 54:1, Galatians 4:26, 27.

Our Everlasting Father wants begotten children, not created ones. As I have come to understand Romans 8:20, this is what the Creator was hoping for in the frustration of His own creation. The result is that the whole creation is groaning waiting for the revelation of the glorious liberty of His begotten children. The righteousness of God tells me that for this to happen, God needed a woman, even a wife. In short God is hoping for an intimacy in an expanded God head that includes us, and that makes leaving, cleaving and one fleshing pale by comparison.
